Temporary balance in Treasury, Jan. 1, 1871,..... $4,838 52

The Treasurer congratulates the Society that the financial deficiency which existed for the past year or two has passed away, and that, should no disaster occur, its income will be much larger the present year than it has heretofore been. He suggests, that out of the income to accrue in the future, a certain per cent., or the residue over a certain amount, should be set aside, to be devoted to a specific purpose. He also suggests, that if greater attention and amenity were extended to persons proposed for membership, by those who proposed them, a much larger number of them would come forward, than now does, for initiation.

As compared with the previous year, the number was 14,371 less, although the average number of books read by each reader was about the same in both years.

The Committee have the satisfaction to report that the Lorillard bequest has all been expended for books, in accordance with the directions of the donor. The number of volumes purchased (as will be seen by the foregoing report of the Librarian) is 2,287, at an average cost of a little less than two dollars and nineteen cents each.

It would have been more satisfactory to the Committee to have purchased such works as would have made full and systematic courses of reading on a few of the most important subjects of science and art; but there being already in the Library a number of works on those subjects, it was evidently more expedient rather to be less systematic, and to supply such as, with those we already had, would render our entire collection most complete.

The works composing this department of the Library are placed on shelves especially erected for them at one end of the room, and will be found, we think, of such a character as to fulfil the benevolent intentions of Mr. Lorillard, and do credit to our institution. A list of them, with the prices annexed, is herewith submitted.

Considerable progress has been made in the preparation of a Supplementary Catalogue, which will probably be ready to issue some time in February.
